1. Default Chapter

Plasma

Rain. That was all he could make out. Rain lots of rain. The rapid but steady patter filled the gray world. Slowly he forced his swollen eyes open. He lay on a hard cold surface that did nothing to hide the strange color of blood and water mixing together on the concrete. He breathed the musty air into his lungs as he tried to raise himself up. He was quickly forced back down by a numbing pain that vibrated from his bleeding shoulder. Where his shoulder lay there was sticky purple puddle of blood. He could not get up, he could not sit up so he just lay there and stared up at the gray sky. He never could remember how long he lay there. Be it hours, days, weeks, time meant nothing. Then a faint light appeared behind him, two lights and growing steadily stronger.

2. Two Men

"Hay! Jackson! Look what I've found!"

"Heh Hay! It's a dead body real good Sami! Come on we got a job to do!"

"No stupid, this ones alive! He still breathin. Look!"

"Ha ha. Well that beets me! It's an Elite, lets kill him."

"Hold on now. You know the regulation any wounded enemies are to be given quarter!"

"Come on now Sami! You're telling my we have to drag this thing back! Come on they'll never know!"

"Don't give me that! You know what happens when you go against regulations!"

"All right, all right! But I don't like this one bit!"
